Inspection findings

Effectiveness of the leadership and management is outstanding

Safeguarding arrangements are effective. There are clear procedures for safeguarding children and staff have a vigilant understanding of their role to protect them. The manager is passionate about providing a high-quality provision where children can take ownership of their play. She sets an excellent example to a committed staff team, who work exceptionally well together to achieve outstanding practice across the club. There is a highly effective programme of training to support staff's professional development. Staff regularly discuss and reflect on their practice during team and impromptu meetings. This ensures that staff have the knowledge and skills to meet the diverse needs of individual and groups of children attending.

Quality of teaching, learning and assessment is outstanding

Children relish their time at the club and thoroughly enjoy the excellent range of activities available. For example, children who prefer and enjoy being physical and playing outdoors can use an amazing outdoor play area. They ride bikes, learn to roller skate and skate board. They also enjoy using equipment such as torches and magnifiers to hunt and play hide and seek in the bushes and overgrown areas in the playground. There are great opportunities for children to be creative and their work is valued. For example, staff create a safe environment with an interesting range of materials, where children freely make their own creations. However, at times staff realise that they could develop children's levels of independence even further. Children take pride in a mural that they made using various materials such as bottle tops, building bricks and container lids, which is displayed in the outdoor area.

Personal development, behaviour and welfare are outstanding

Children play exceptionally well together. For example, they cooperate well during group activities, show kindness towards each other and help each other complete tasks. They behave well and respond well to the positive praise and encouragement they receive. Children are valued and respected. For example, they share their views easily and make decisions about their play. They learn to keep themselves safe and manage risks as they navigate their way in the indoor and outdoor learning environments closely supervised by staff. Children demonstrate very good hygiene practices and self-care skills, and staff place a strong emphasis on being active. Staff reinforce children's understanding of healthy eating as they involve children in growing their own vegetables. They successfully support children's awareness of diversity and difference. For example, they encourage children to participate in community events, to embrace difference and to value and respect others.
